

A n n o t a t i o n

Mariam Archvadze

„ Development of wine in Georgia and ways of its falsification ‘

Department of Chemistry, Iv. Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University
Ilia Chavchavadze Ave. 3

Viticulture and winemaking are important branches of Georgia. Georgia is considered to be the world's top quality wine production area, and to achieve all this, the country has gone through a long way in the development of winemaking and viticulture and is still trying to develop it, because people's needs are increasing day by day, and accordingly the criteria of the trade market are also increasing and often changing and developing. Accordingly, maintaining and improving the quality of wine is not only the priority of the wine producing companies, but of the state.

In Georgia, as the homeland of wine, more than 500 varieties of local vines have survived today. It is this diverse material that gives Georgian winemakers the opportunity to discover wines of different qualities with their special aromas and other characteristics in every corner.

It is important that the wine is quality and natural. Wine quality control has been put on the world agenda since the production of falsified wine has increased. Georgian winemaking has been facing many problems for decades thanks to counterfeiters, and this primarily hurts the prestige of Georgian wine and winemaking in general. Counterfeiters also contribute to the degradation of consumer taste. On this important topic And I will also talk about the above topics in detail in my paper.